Heart of Gold by Neil Young - Songfacts

When my heart is made from gold And forgiveness seems too bold I still find it in my heart To say "I love you" When my heart is made from gold And the hurt is just too bold. I still find it in my heart To say "I love you" But you don't have to be so mean You're such a drama queen The way you play on every weakness That you see in me, to make you strong

Heart of Gold (Neil Young song) - Wikipedia

Keeps me searching for a heart of gold And I'm getting old. I've been to Hollywood I've been to Redwood I crossed the ocean for a heart of gold I've been in my mind, it's such a fine line That keeps me searching for a heart of gold And I'm getting old. Keeps me searching for a heart of gold And I'm getting old.

I always liked Neil Young, but it bothered me every time I listened to "Heart of Gold." I think it was up at number one for a long time, and I'd say, "Shit, that's me. If it sounds like me, it should as well be me."

Neil Young - Heart of Gold/Lyrics (Full HD)

With a straightforward metaphor and complete lack of pathos, this is not a typical Neil Young song. It finds him mining for a "heart of gold," which depending on your perspective, is either a touching and heartfelt sentiment, or a mawkish platitude.

General Comment always took "It's these expressions I never give, That keep me searchin' for a heart of gold" to mean he's never met someone he truely loved, who he could say "I love you" to (and mean it), and so he's still on the lookout. I like the idea where hes searching for the god in himself better though, I've never thought of it that way before.
